Dear Ones,

The year is going quickly. No doubt about that. And while it may seem that I'm speeding things up by writing about Advent, which starts December 1, I'm going to write about Advent. It's not too far off and though it is a season of preparation, we need to do some preparing for the season of preparing. Here's why: Advent is the beginning of the church year (also known as the liturgical year or Christian year). That means we run about a month ahead of the cultural New Year.

The cultural New Year is frequently accompanied by our New Year's resolutions. In the past, I have resolved to work out more, eat better, and read more. There are countless Excel spreadsheets on my computer documenting my progress, but I'm not sure any of them document progress beyond January 21. Three weeks seems to be the duration of how long I can keep up the illusion that I can craft myself into perfection.

I do not mean to discourage New Year's resolutions. It's beneficial to seek to be a better version of ourselves, and the resolutions that stick are clearly important for our well-being. However, those of us who seek discipleship in following Jesus must recognize that there is a difference between the cultural New Year and the resolutions that come with it and the Christian new year and a call from God. As hard as we may try, God's full blessing will elude us at the YMCA. Some of it might be found there, sure, but we are called, in Advent, to prepare. We do this by listening. We do this by waiting. We do this by worshiping, studying, and having fellowship together. In Advent, we are given the gift of time in advance to discern what it is that God is laying upon our hearts. We are given the gift of time to prepare for the coming of Jesus Christ.

The notion of preparing for Jesus' coming should be a frightening one, even more so than going to the gym. Here's why. In the Gospels, Jesus' coming is almost always followed by the call of the first disciples. Granted, a few years happen in between the nativity story and that call, but calling accompanies Jesus' incarnation. For the first disciples, call meant leaving nearly everything behind, be it family or wallet or children or vocation. For Abraham and Sarah, call meant leaving their homeland behind for an unknown destination. For Moses, it meant leaving the riches of the palace for a place among the enslaved people and then leaving behind the anonymity of the wilderness to return to that people. In short, discipleship is disorienting. It requires letting go of something we hold dear. At the same time, it is something that helps us to grow and gives to us God's blessing. Abraham and Sarah received children though they had been barren for decades. The disciples witnessed firsthand Jesus' teaching and healing and feeding and then were invited to do the same. Moses liberated the people and watched as God guided them through the wilderness to the edge of the promised land.

As the start of the Christian new year approaches, let us recognize that we are given time in Advent to listen and to wait. We are given the opportunity to align ourselves with God's time and not the world's time. We are given the opportunity to hear, anticipate, and answer the call upon our lives so that, come January 1, we are ready to be salt and light for a wandering world – a world that needs something more than just resolutions – a world that needs the love and grace that comes to us at Christmas.

Be blessed and be a blessing,

Pastor Karl

The weekend of October 18th I had the opportunity to attend a conference in Jackson Hole on the book Grow-ing Young: 6 Essential Strategies to Help Young People Discover and Love Your Church. The book is based on a 4 year nation wide study headed by Fuller Youth Institute, FYI. The study focused on churches that had a large number of engaged youth and young adults. The study included all religions, church locations, and con-gregation sizes. It was full of powerful statistics, insights, and thought provoking information.

Some of the thoughts and information that I took away:

- —There is no major Christian religion that is growing.
- —We need to recalibrate our thinking, worship service, and programing to meet today's society. Many of the church's are doing an 1980's style worship and '90-00's youth ministry.
- —Growing young is about changing the church culture.
- -It is not a programmatic issue .
- -It is the responsibility of the church as whole and just not two or three people.

The theme that kept repeating was it isn't about who has the best youth group, or worship service, but it was about who kept the mission and the life of the church Jesus centered. They talked about how the youth felt connected to the church, the people, the missions of the church, and how they felt that they had a voice and were heard.

The top 5 influencing facts FYI identified as why youth and young adults are Number one they move away. The discussion of how we are a more mobile society than we have been in the pass. The number two reason is they feel like they are being judged. The older generations of the church are passing judgement. They don't take the time to get to know the youth as a person. Stereotypes get in the way of relationships. Through the judging, or the feeling of being judged, then they see the church filled with hypocrites. Youth are watching and examining how the church responses to the social issues. Is the church responding in accordance to scripture and Jesus' teaching? Are we loving our neighbor? The third reason, they feel disconnected from the congregation. They do not have any meaningful connections to the church or its members. They want to be apart of the workings of the church. The fourth reason, they don't agree with the church on social issues. The church comes out against or support of social issues they don't agree with the view of the church why stay? The last reason is work. In today's society, work isn't just Monday through Friday. Many of today's youth and young adults are working odd hours and shifts. They can't attend church on Sunday mornings. Their schedules don't allow them to come to the traditional Sunday morning worship times.

The youth and adults, are struggling with questions, as who am I, where do I belong, and do I matter to? They turn to the church for answers and they are left hanging. They don't see any direction from the church. How does the church help answer this questions. Why stay somewhere that they are not getting the questions and needs meet?

A major take away for me was just BE with the youth. Don't judge. Don't have an agenda. Don't assume you know what it is like to be there age. We may have been their chronological age, but we have never been their age. They have different life experiences, life influences (social media), domestic and international events that shape their lives, For example, when we were at Triennium, one of the youth came up to me and asked, if there was a mass shooting where would be the closest, safest exit?

Then they proceeded to explain to my why Triennium would make a good target for a shooting. I would have NEVER thought of that, and certainly not at 14 years old. They want us to journey with them, to listen. Most of the time they are not looking for answers they want to know that you are there. That you hear and see them. They are asking to be listened to and not judge. They want to hear tell me more. Through these relationships, organically developed, meet the needs of the youth.

Brain said to really grow young, the church needs to make a conscious effort to put the youth first in all thoughts, planning, and life of the church. We as a church need to ask, how will this impact the youth? Where are the youth showing up on our calendar? How are we activity engaging the youth? What message are we sending? It isn't about changing the church or youth ministry, it is about changing the culture of the church.

As First Presbyterian Church of Sheridan how are we meeting the needs or helping the youth address their questions? We need to take an honest look at yourselves, the church and our missions to see if we are really meeting the needs. We need to build a new imagination, an imagination that grows and expands outside our normal thinking. Through that imagination things will blossom and grow.

Blood Drive–December 5th

7:00 am to 10:15 am

Want to be the ultimate good Samaritan? To give a gift and know that you are helping at least 3 people and their family and friends with no way for them to know who helped them? Donate blood!! There is a great need for blood here in Sheridan county. Our hospital needs about 150 units per day to meet the demands. According to Vitalant, they can only supply about 100 units per day. With that deficit, needed surgeries will be postponed or transferred to other facilities and doctors may have to prioritize who gets helped.

FPC is hosting this blood drive in the fellowship hall. Sign up times are available in the information center with appointments every 15 minutes.

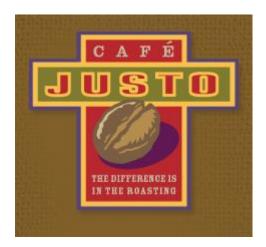

Give the gift of life this Christmas, donate blood.

The Food Group

Are you looking for a rewarding mission project that only commits you to one day a month? On the second Wednesday of each month volunteers meet at the Food Group building 305 Broadway Street at 10 AM to fill bags with food that will help feed a child over the weekend. Then the food is transported to the school. If you are interested in volunteering for this worthwhile cause, contact Kathy Beagle or Nancy Elliott.

We hope to see you Wednesday, November 13 at 10 AM at the Food Group Building at 305 Broadway next to Sheridan Commercial.

A reminder for the holidays! Mission Committee can special order coffee for you and we have gift certificates available.
